TILL BE A BAD WINTER MONTH DEATH CALLS JAMES WELLS

PIONEER RESIDENT OF PUTNAM COUNTY AND RESIDENT OF THIS CITY FOR PAST TWENTY YEARS, EXPIRES AT HOME OF SON, LEE WELLS, SUNDAY AFT-

MOVED TO COUNTY IN 1849

James Wells, a resident of Greencastle for the past twenty years and a resident of Putnam county since 1849, died at the home of his son, Wells, 1017 South Indiana street, Sunday afternoon about 11 o'clock. The funeral services will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wells Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock; burial in Forest Hill cemetery. Mrs. Wells, wife of the deceased, died less than six weeks ago. The cause of Mr. Wells' demise was kidney disease, together with old age. He was past 86 years old.

Mr. Wells was born in Ohio but moved to this county in 1849, locating at Mt. Meridian. Here he operated a lumber and grist mill until he moved to this city, about 20 years ago. For a number of years he owned a grist and lumber mill where the lightning rod factory now stands. This mill burned a number of years ago. Later, Mr. Wells was proprietor of a grocery store in the location now occupied by the Browning gro-had retired from active business. During the past three years he had been in failing health and there was little hope entertained for his recovery. His condition did not become serious, however, until a few days ago. Mr. Wells is survived by only one child Lee Wells. The deceased was well known to many Putnam county people, especially the residents of Mt. Meridian and vicinity.

TRIES TO TAKE LIFE WITH ACID

HARVEY ALLEE, A FORMER RESI-DENT OF MT. MERIDIAN, IS CARBOLIC ACID AT INDIANAPO-LIS SATURDAY AFTERNOON.

DESPONDENCY THE CAUSE

Harvey Allee, a former resident of this city, attempted suicide by drinking carbolic acid in Indianapolis Saturday afternoon, according to Indianapolis papers. His attempt was futile, however, and he was taken to a hospital. According to the Indianapolis paper, Allee, after his attempt at suicide was frustrated, remarked, "By gosh, the next time

I'll do it right." Allee was born and reared in the vicinity of Mt. Meridian. He is of an eccentric character and, it is said, is mentally unbalanced. He has not lived in this county for several years, although he has been here frequently on visits. Allee remarked to a friend here whom he stayed over night with several weeks ago that he was tired of living and that he had contemplated suicide. Despondency is said to have been the cause for Allee's attempt on his life.

JAMES P. HUGHES.

Although he officially took his office as Judge of the Putnam Circuit court, soon after the election this fall, Judge James P. Hughes, can rightfully be classed as one of Put nam county's new officers. Judge Hughes first took the office as an appointee of Governor Marshall. This was at the time that the judicial district composing Putnam and Clay counties was divided and made into two separate districts. Under his appointment he held office until a couple of weeks after the election in No-In that election Judge Hughes had only one opponent, the Hon. Jackson Boyd, and was elected by a majority of more than 2,000 The Republican party had no candi date, the Hon. Ben S. Corwin, who was the nominee of that party withdrawing from the race soon after he was nominated. In the Democratic primary there was no opposition to the nomination of Judge Hughes.

While yet a young man he has achieved a brilliant record in legal circles. He is a close student, solidly entrenched in the principles, routine technicalties and complicated machinery of the law, careful, and conscientious, his creed being that just decisions in the many cases trie before him depend on work, hard, unremitting, indefatigable work. He always stands on a logical outlook is a reasoner, dissector and analyst yet with all his ability he is entire ly unassuming. Judge Hughes was born in Vigo county, on Dec. 18 1874, but spent the early years of his life on his father's farm near Cloverdale. He is a graduate of DePauw University in the class of '97 and a graduate of the Indiana Law school PREVENTED FROM DRINKING His first public office was that of Prosecuting Attorney for Clay and Putnam counties. In Judge Hughes the Putnam County Democracy has an officer of which it is justly proud.

Discusses Rockville Situation.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Dec. 28 .-Representative Ralph W. Moss of the Fifth District was here today and conferred with Democrats in regard to the Rockville postoffice. He had recommended L. W. Humphries, Democratic county chairman, for the place. This created dissension among the Democrats and they held a public meeting. A committee was appointed to confer with Mr. Moss. He has taken the question under advisement and said that District Chairman Randall of Greencastle was as much interested in the appointment as he.

The afternoon session was presided over by Judge A. A. Adams of the Appellate Court, president pro tem. Petitions for charters were received from Williams College, Williamstown, Mass., and John B. Setson university, Florida. Neither of these were acted upon owing to the fact

Arrangements for the convention were made by a committee consisting of Ervin Wagner, Raymond D Brown and Willis N. Coval of Indianapolis, members of the Beta Graduate Chapter.

Frost Gets Pardon.

Governor Marshall late Saturday afternoon acted favorably on the miles, from the postoffice where the recommendation that a conditional parole be granted Merle Frost, who is under sentence here of 2 to 14 years for embezzlement, and it is expected that Frost will be a free man after Monday.

One of the conditions of the parol is that Frost make entire restitution to the Harmony Lodge of Odd Fellows of the money which he is charged with having contrverted to his own use. The total shortage was fixed at $1,326 and of this amount $500 has already been restored to the lodge. The balance of $826 must be paid before the parole granted by the governor can take effect and it is understood that this will be paid over to the lodge Monday and Frost will then be given his liberty on parole.

The Frost case has been in the courts for about three years. Frost disappeared when the shortage was discovered and after about a year's absence returned and stood trial. He was found guilty and his attorneys took an appeal to the Supreme court on the ground that the affidavit was not good. The affidavit was held good by the higher court and as a last effort to secure Frost's freedom the members of the Harmony Lodge of Odd Fellows petitioned the court here to release Frost under suspended sentence as arrangements had been made to pay back all the money.

Judge Rawley held that the pro- start it was the unanimous opinion eedings had gone too far for him to interfere but recommended to the Ortic E. ON ROAD OF CHEER

Salt of the Earth Doing Man's Work in Wonderful Woman's Way.

By LILIAN DUCEY.

(Copyright, 1913, by Universal Press Syndicate.) Something like the divine fever of spring always stirred within Dr. Cosgrave at Christmas time. Each year, for 365 days, less one evening, he was the staid and steady surgeon, a general in his field, but on Christmas eve he sallied forth and joined the motley throng along the blazing trail of sparkling shops.

He saw her first, arms full of bundles, emerging from one of the brilliant stores. He, himself, was on the point of entering, but the joy of her face, the light of her eyes stayed him. However, the light was not for him. Oh, no! Coming along were two ragged urchins. And she fairly seized

"Of course you have a sister at home-" her voice lilted and sang-"for there's a doll in here! And you are brothers; I can see that. Some of the things are for boys, too!" She filled their arms with bundles. "Now go right home. They are from Santa and a Merry Christmas!'

Dr. Cosgrave stood and stared, as it dawned upon him that here was someone employing his same unique method of dispensing Christmas cheer. He hadn't known that in the whole wild world there might be another disciple of Santa other than himself. But there she was.

He followed her into the store; but amid the bustle he lost her, then forgot her. In truth the road of cheer was such a fascinating one, once started along its trail, extraneous in fluences held no allure

But he saw her again, half an hour afterwards. And there was no mistaking her. Simply by the light of her face he would have known her Now she was leading a little girl by the hand, and in their wake came the poorly clad mother, the gleam of joy within her tired eyes. They were making their way toward Cosgrave to where, tier on tier, were piled dolls without number in their cardboard Cosgrave himself, was gingerly holding a doll in each arm, as he waited for a little mite to make her choice. And in the minutes that followed he had much ado to keep from talking.

This was only the beginning of many such encounters. Here, there, and everywhere they met, until Cos grave could have sworn that in the depths of her eyes stood a sparkle of understanding. His own were alight with sparkles. Never had the road of cheer been so pleasant. But it did seem as if two such samaritans should speak in passing. However, even without, a bond semed to exist between them. As Cosgrave humorously put it, spirit was communing with spirit, although lips were mute. It was a bit of sentimentalism that made him feel unaccountably young and unaccountably foolish. But the experience was so pleasant that suddenly, by hook or by crook, he determined to get into conversation with her.

"Why not?" he said to himself "Why not?" echoed some taunting second self.

But he was too late. When he set out to put his determination into effect, she was not to be found.

To say that Cosgrave spent the rest of the time searching, is misstating. Certain it is, however, that much of the Christmas spirit fell from him At last he decided that he had played Santa Claus enough. And it was then quite an hour later, that he came upon her again as he was leaving the store in a somewhat dejected Christmas

"Oh, Mr. Santa-if you please-just a moment!' He gaped wiltless, for he had not seen her until she spoke. And speech being beyond him, he simply lifted his hat, a purely mechanical move

"I'm in such a predicament," she hurried on, blushing slightly. "I've been standing here-wondering what to do," she paused. "You-you were doing what I was-that is why-" In spite of her unwavering gaze

she was having difficulty in expressing herself, and he rushed to the res words with set teeth. "I've lost my purse," she spoke with assurance now, as if convinced of his kindliness. 'I haven't a penny -and do not live in the city. Would you-could you let me have enough to get home? Fifty cents?-and if you'll let me have your address-' "I would-and I could." Laughter twinkled all over Cosgrave's face. "I haven't spent as much as I expected to-see!" From his pocket he brought forth two five-dollar bills, one of which he handed her.

"But I don't need all that," she protested. 'Oh, but you can't tell," he smiled whimsically. "Besides, here I have been giving my goods to rejoice the poor-why shouldn't I succor the

"If you really care to trust meshe began.

"Trust you!" he cut in. Once more he had to hold his teeth upon what sprung to his lips. This time it was a phrase of childhood that had almost burst from him. He wanted to say:

"I'll trust you like anything," but said Instead: "Certainly."

"And your address?" sweetly. From a card case that he brought from an inside pocket, Cosgrave supplied her with the information. "Thank you." She bowed slightly and looked at the card. The next moment she gave him a swift scrutiny, a look of understanding.

But if he thought that she would offer evidence in kind, he was mistaken. As she tucked the card away in her glove, she said:

"You'll hear from me in the morn inf. doctor. I'll telegraph this to you the first thing in the morning." And whatever the man may have wanted to say was lost in the rush of her departure.

"If I make haste," she hurried away, 'I'll catch a train. Good-bye and thank you so much!

Cosgrave watched her go, raising his hat as she looked back after boarding a car. Why hadn't she giv en him her name? It came to him suddenly that she looked like a person of importance herself. Shrugging a little at his susceptibility and intense desire to know her, he went back into the store, back into the toy department and the saleslady he had heard her speaking with in a way to denote that they had met before.

It wasn't just the thing to do, he But after what Cosgrave considered the utmost adroitness, and which left the saleswoman with a mirthful sparkle in her eyes, he came away with the news that the lady in question, who came there each year and played Mrs. Santa Claus, was Dr. Mary Joyce of Burley.

"Dr. Mary Joyce," he said the name over and over to himself as he went home. "Why, it smacks of the Christmas joy!" Then he wondered why the very fellowship of their professions should not have induced her to tell him who she was.

In his office, Cosgrave called up a particular friend and colleague who lived in that same town of Burley. Without preamble he went straight to the point, although he did laugh at himself as he did so.

"Kennedy," he called, "do you by any chance know a lady from your place by the name of Joyce?' "Oh, hello, Cosgrave!" bellowed a big voice with a fluting brogue. "Did you know it was 12 o'clock, man? And that life and death messages only should disturb a busy doctor from his sleep at this hour?'

Cosgrave could imagine the chuckle of amusement that went with this, but he was not to be deterred by it. 'You didn't answer my question

And more than that, in a world of women and children she is doing a man's work in a wonderful woman way. And furthermore, if you were to ask me, I'd plicit confidence. you wanted?' "How are all the little Kennedys?"

Cosgrave laughed. "Fine!" Satisfaction edged the deep voice with greater depth. "I'm dressing the tree. Say, come up and spend Christmas with us? Sure, it's only a stone's throw to Dr. Joyce's house.

Again Cosgrave laughed into the phone. "Kennedy," he said, "you're wrong. Can't one physician inquire into the merits of another? Goodbye! Run in and see me when you can. The next moment he had rung off. But the next he was slipping into his coat again. And presently in a florist's shop he was writing a little note-to be sent with a dozen American Beauty roses. It read:

"Plucked on the Road of Cheer. From one samaritan to another-with the season's greetings!"

Then with eyes that flashed as a boy's do when he takes a dare, he went back home and called up Dr. Kennedy again.

'Oh, Kennedy," he laughed heartily, "I forgot to say that I acept your invitation. Could you"-he coughedor rather, is there any way possi-

This is largely due to lack of management and planning.

"For example, there are two farms in New York state near Elmira. They are the same size and the same types ci farming obtain on both. At the end of a year's work one of these farms showed a net profit of $131 after paying 5 per cent. on the invested capital. The other farm showed a net profit of $1,788.

"This wide difference seems almost unbelievable. But it is true, nevertheless. Furthermore, the two farms adjoin, the land is practically identical In fact, the farmer who managed work of only $131 harvested heavier neighbor who showed so much largsmall profit is now operating on a successful neighbor, because some of his yields have been larger. His farm was wholly lacking in balance. He

"If the farmer will permit our cometent experts to map out his work, howing him how much of this, that r the other crop he can raise to best dvantage, how much stock he needs do the work and for market puroses, and will follow instructions, te results will come. He can largeincrease his income without inreasing his expenses perceptibly. and can go right on farming the way he has for years, only adopting our copping system in lieu of the one he has been following.

We now have seven experts do ing co-operative work in as many unties in New York state, and will have two more at work before the year. At pres ent farm management experts are work in Broome, Chemung, Herkimer, Jefferson, Oneida, St. Lawrence and Tompkins counties. We have not finally determined where the other two men will be placed. They very likely will be put to work in counties lying along the right of way of the Lackawanna railroad, which also is co-eperating with the office by paying methird of the expenses of experts in two counties.

"We welcome this kind of co-operatien, because it enables us to make ir money stretch one-third further. The railroad, of course, expects to get return on its investment through hauling increased yields of various crops due to better farming. The Lackawanna also is co-operating with us in one New Jersey county.

"There are many more requests for help from New York counties with its present appropriation. Under the plan of co-operation with counties, the government stands onehalf the expense of the expert and the cople of the county the other half. Where a railroad also co-operates, the expense is divided into three parts."

Rainmaker Kept Secret.

On the Aegean island of Santorini (Thera) a modern traveler encountered a rainmaker a few years ago. She was a very old woman, seated on he extreme edge of the harbor cliff, and it appeared that the islanders had laid her in advance for her present effort at rainmaking, although once she had so disappointed them that they tried to burn her house over her head. The traveler also paid a trifle to her for rain and before he left her thunder was heard and more rain than he wanted followed. The old soman would not give away the ormula, but admitted that she caused the rain, not by her own virtue, but ecause she knew "the god above and he god below."

OLD SOL IN BAD.

"Excessive sunlight may be responsible for American nervousness, as sunlight is a nerve stimulant," said Dr. Gardner C. Basset of the psychological department of Johns Hopkins in a lecture at the exhibition of hygiene and demography.

"But," he added, "how sunlight affects mental activity is still a subject for investigation.

Mental work, according to Dr. Basset, can be done more effectively when one is lying down. UNIQUE RAILROAD SYSTEM.

The United States senate is building its own railroad system. Work was started on the project the other day, and when the solons who hold forth in the upper branch of congress come back to resume their duties in December they will be able to ride right from their offices in the senate office building to the capitol, where elevators will whisk them to whatever floor they wish to go.

A monorail system is being stalled in the tunnel leading from the office building to the capitol, and will be a double-tracked, sure-enough rapid-transit line about 500 feet in hatless, catless, breathless man dashed length.

The cars will be operated by electricity, but owing to restrictions of space they will not be of Pullman proportions, and it is possible that senators who are corpulent in girth may find it convenient to walk.

HIS CONSCIENCE RELIEVED.

After giving personal attention to the letter of a Decorah (Iowa) man who desired to ease his mind by paying the United States two cents, Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh the other day removed the minimum limit of five cents on "conscience fund" contributions. The letter read:

'Onkel Sam, United States Treasury "Hereby I sent 2 cents which I owe by mistake I were sending a little article with mail and put a slip of writing in with after sum time i thought i did not do right and regret, so excuse me."

Woman May Be Legislator. Quite a hubbub surrounds the question of whether Frau Beatrix Kunetitzky, the young Czech writer, should be allowed to take a seat in the Bohemian diet, according to the wish of the voters of Junghunziau. It is up to the governor of Bohemia to decide, for, though there is no specific prohibition of woman legislators in the electoral laws, no woman has ever been elected before, and the opponents of woman in politics are straining the meaning of certain words to make them appear to indicate the eligibility of men only for election. But the governor ih a cautious man, and his present idea is to let the diet decide as to the admission of Frau Kunetitzky at an early sitting.

ALFRED G. VANDERBILT

Alfred G. Vanderbilt's thirty-fifth birthday was celebrated on October 20. This fact, of more or less general interest, was very significant to Vanderbilt himself, because this was the day on which, accord ing to his father's will, he came into full possession of the vast fortune which was left to him. That is to say, $25,000,000 This, in addition to the $25,000,000 he received on attaining his thirtieth year, put Mr. Vanderbilt in the ranks of the super-dreadnaughts of American finance. While the sum of Mr. Vanderbilt's fortune is set down at $50,000,000, it is believed by those who have made a tunes that the holdings of young Mr. Vanderbilt will exceed that amount by several million dollars. This accretion has come in spite of his prodigal expenditures both in this country and

Alfred G. Vanderbilt is now the master of the wealth left by his father for the reason that his elder brother, Cornelius, lost favor with his father a few years before the latter's death. Had this not occurred the great fortune would now be divided equally between the two brothers. The breach between Cornelius Vanderbilt and his father was never healed, although members of the family and close friends did all in their power to dissipate the elder Vanderbilt's anger against his son. As a consequence, Cornelius was cut off with the comparatively meager sum of $1,500,000, but it is believed, in fact, generally understood, that the "disinherited" son has not been obliged to worry along on his slim inheritance; that both his brother Alfred and his mother have contributed out of their own patrimonies to his purse to the extent of $10,000,000 or $12,000,000. While Alfred G. Vanderbilt has now become one of America's real wealthy citizens, it is not generally believed that it will have any special or direct effect upon American finance so far as active commerce is concerned. This young millionaire seems never to have had much fancy for business or the manipulation of finance that involves any greater intricacies than the process of maintaining blooded horses and elegant apartments in New York, London and Paris, conducting horse shows and driving coaches. This has been his habit for years and It is not to be expected therefore that he will drop these diversions which he so dearly loves to enter into a business career, for which he has no taste.

Of late years Mr. Vanderbilt has spent most of his time abroad. He favors Europe as a playground more than he does his native country. His passion for coaching found an outlet a few years ago when he established the old ccach line between London and Brighton, and he soon became a very familiar figure in the English metropolis sitting on the box of his coach speeding with his fashionable passengers on the way to Brighton. As president of the New York Horse show, Mr. Vanderbilt takes rank as the foremost society horseman in America, and in the circle of those who go in for such things, he enjoys great popularity.

While his social position and wealth gives him a place in the inner temple of society, he has never shown a great taste for the conventional functions of Fifth avenue and Newport nor London's West End.

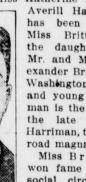

However, society has always watch ed his movements with keen interest. and it is not overstating the case to say that he has given society many a piquant theme for drawing room dis

AMONG MOST WEALTHY CAPTURED IN MID-AIR

Here Is a Fish Story That Has the Real Flavor.

Bird on the Wing Rewarded Efforts of Club Commodore, Whose Veracity May Not Be Called in Question.

Sitting on the float of the Palisade Boat club in Yonkers, several members and friends were relating vacation adventures of this season. Fish, enakes and other reptiles had been favored with their innings. Bear, deer, birds, canoe upsets and rescues from drowning also had received veracious attention, when former Commodore William J. Lord of the Yonkers Yacht club moved his chair to the edge of the group. "Friends and fellow citizens," said he, "I don't expect any of you to tell, but it doesn't make much difference to me, for the narrative is true. Most of you know." the former commodore went on, "that I put in three weeks at Watkins Glen, on Seneca lake. One evening, shortly after sunset, I took a pole and line and went down to the water. The hook was baited with a salmon fly, and I thought some kind of fish would strike at it. I was disappointed. After making probably 100 or more casts at different points in the lake, I was getting discouraged. Just as I had resolved to go back to the hotel, I made another cast. I watched to see and hear the faint splash in the water. It did not come. The fly did not touch the lake. And not a tree or other obstacle for it to strike was within 500 yards. I was amazed.

"Suddenly the line straightened. Next came a series of jerks, short and long pulls. The line sawed up and down and from side to side. I had a bite in mid-air. But no fish of my ex perience ever behaved in this fashion after taking a hook. For possibly two minutes the tugging continued, when the pole was twitched out of my hands and I saw it go sailing inland at a height of perhaps 30 feet followed the fishing tackle. Soon t caught in a clump of bushes and there the outfit remained. Seizing the pole at the butt, I began to wind up the line on the reel. Nothing else moved for some seconds, but when it became taut there was a commotion among the leaves. Then I found that I had safely secured my catch. My prisoner was a cheiropter of good size. The fishline was twisted about a twig and held the captive fast. And there it was hanging. It had swallowed the fly and also the hook, which it had mistaken for the real thing while in the air." "Commodore," said a young lady, breaking the abysmal silence of the listening group, "what is a cheirop-"A cheiropter," the commodore replied, "is a bat-a bat that eats in-

Improved Outfit for Diver.

When clothed in the ordinary divelmet a diver is helpless that is pumped down to him fills not only the helmet, but the entire suit puffing it out to such an extent that heavy weights are required to keep the man down. The work that h can do is limited. One of the annoyances that he has to endure is the fact that he cannot reach inside of his suit to ease any discomfort. A diver once discovered a June bug in his helmet when he was down under water and he was obliged to endure all the torture of having the insect crawl over his face without any possible means of reaching it to destroy it or even brush it away. Recently, however, a French inventor devised diver's outfit which dispenses with everything but an abbreviated form or helmet. Air is pumped to the Remarkable How Zemo Clears the diver in the usual way, through a pipe which is attached to his helmet at the back of the neck.

Two Ways.

A hunter of the old school, who would shoot a bullet through a railroad cross-tie. The old hunter was confident of winning, as he had tested his gun on cross-ties, hickory, oak and even ironwood.

The bet was to be decided in the lumber yard back of the depot. The old hunter arrived at that place in advance of the others. He arranged several of the thickest cross-ties for the test by standing them against piles of lumber with their flat sides forward. Imagine his astonishment when the man with whom he had made the bet upon arriving, exclaim-

"Flatways! Are you daffy, man? Turn them endways!" The hunter of the old school lost

Pistol as Aid to Teaching.

As the result of an accident it has been discovered that the schoolmaster at the village of Burglen, Canton of O Thurgovie, Switzerland, has been employing a pistol as an aid to teaching O in class and pointing the instrument o at any refractory pupil with, it appears, successful results.

During the absence of the master the boys took the pistol from the desk, and a boy in play ared at a comrade, who fell with a bullet through his shoulder. An inquiry has been opened by the local authorities and the schoolmaster suspended pending the result.

THE RTV. DIMMITT

STILL IN LIMELIGHT.

The report of the sermon preached recently by Dr. L. F. Dimmitt, pastor of the First M. E. church, in which he took women to task for the present day fashions, the tightness of their clothing as well as the scarcity of it, seems to have been spread broadcast from one end of the country to the other. As a result, Dr Dimmitt is still getting letters about what he said and up to date he has received between twenty-five an thirty communications. These letters as far east as Boston, as far north as Chicago, and from Atlanta, Ga., on

Dr. Dimmitt says all these letters commended him for the stand he took on women and their fashions ed between men and women. A Bos ton woman who said she was ? years old, wanted Dr. Dimmit : publish the sermon in full. She of fered to pay the expense of having the sermon printed, after which she wanted the document distributed as a tract.

The two letters taking the minis ter to task for what he said came from women, one in Chicago and the other in Indianapolis. The Chicag woman was sarcastle and suggested to the minister that if clergymen did not like the looks of women in the present day style they should not "rubber" at them so much. The Indianapolis woman took the other view She said she was shamed and shock ed to think that a minister of the gospel had prostituted the pulpit so low as to give time and thought to such unworthy subjects. She was also shocked at some of the things Dr. Dimmitt reported to have said and it made her sad, indeed, to know that in this land a minister had stopped preaching the gospel long enough to tell women what to wear and how they should wear it.

Dr. Dimmitt is inclined to think that any statements he made about women's fashions were not too harsh and that the wide publicity his sering some women who are slaves of fashion. He thinks that some of lengths, sulphurs the ends, counts them may pause and consider how ridiculous they look, and have their skirts cut wider the next time.

Dr. Dimmitt takes pretty much the same stand that Dr. J. N. Hurty, secretary of the state board of health, tages. Dr. Hurty says he can talk himself hoarse about sanitary conditions and get no results, but when he says something mean and calls names he gets a rise out of the people he wants to arouse and accomplishes some good.-Columbus Republicas.

National Reform Meeting.

At a union service Sunday night held in the College Avenue church, Rev. G. H. L. Beeman, field secretary of the National Reform Association, spoke upon "The Best Citizenship," taking for a text Prov. 14:34-"Righteousness exaleth a nation but sin is a reproach to any people." It will be distinctively a citizenship conference on a Christian basis and from the Christian view-point. Its background is to be the Word of God. In a recent number of the Daily Consular Reports are collected memoranda from cities and towns in various distant parts of the word showing the universal quality of the popular interest which the moving pictures excite.
